Dear friend Garrison,

Don't be frightened at the multitude of letters you get from me! I don't ask half the questions I went to! But it won't last long, probably.

(1.) Don't you remember the phrase used by some person, in early A.S. times, calling on the Authorities to visit the Abolitionists "with good wholesome fine and imprisonment"? Who was the person?

I just receive your note, enclosing back to me the copy of my letter to Henry Wilson. If he takes no notice of it or me, would you think it worth while for me to publish this, or a more condensed reply to his mis-readings of history?

Yours truly
S. May.
